REPEALERS IN AN AWKWARD POSITION. Less can be said of the repeal Democrats who, starting with a supposed vote of twenty-four or twenty-five, found themselves in the end reing been drawn off to the support of the on Saturday. Messrs. on Saturday. Messrs. McPherson, Mills, Hill, Vilas, Mitchell, of Wisconsin, and Caffery were the only Democratis who from first to last adhered unfinehingly to the unconditional repeal programme, and with them alone, of all the Democratic repealers, can the honors of the apparent victory of repeal be justly shared by its Republican friends.

No single Democrat comes out of the repeal contest, as it now seems likely to terminate, in a more unfortunate plight than Mr. Gorman has for three years past been the undisputed leader of his party in the Senate. Entering the present struggle as a nominal repealer, but in reality as the advocate of a poiley of conciliation between the two wings of the Democratic majority, he has for three months bent all his energies toward forcing a compromise on the Administration. The agreement of Saturday last was the fruit of his long and patient effort to harmonize party divisions and present and pass a strictly party repeal bill. He seemed on the verge of a success which was to seal his power and prestige in the Senate, even as against the whole weight of Administration influence, when the President's hostile ultimatum dashed the compromise scheme to atoms. Mr. Gorman has now his choice between eating his humble pie and returning to the Administration ranks, or, by sticking to compromise, finding himself at the head no longer of the Democratic many political admirers with a curious and puinful interest.

The recent course of Mr. Harris, of Tennessee, her was marked by some strange vagaties. Stewart (Rep., Nev.) continued his speech begun several weeks ago and taken up at various times since then. He expressed his belief that agitation and discussion, where great measures are involved, are most beneficial. The struggle now going on was not, he said, "the irrepressible conflict" whether the slave-owner should call the roll of his slaves in the shadow of Bunker Hill, but it was whether the colossal gold combination could call the roll of its slaves in every cotton, corn and wheat field in America. The gold power and "the cohesive power of public plunder" were at the bottom of the whole trouble. There never had been such a bold and aggressive attempt made to thwart the will of the

The absence of a quorum was here suggested by that the motion was not open to debate.

Mr. Teller (Rep., Col.) called for the year and nays. The vote resulted: Yeas, 5 (Cameron, Coke, Peffer, Stewart and Teller); nays, 36.

There was no quorum voting, as several Senators present were paired, and withheld their votes. The roll was again called and forty-eight Senators re-

Then the question was again taken on Mr. Kyle's motion, and it was rejected, yeas, 4 (Mr. Teller not voting); nays, 4!.

On motion of Mr. Kate (Dem., Iowa), the Senate bill to authorize the Chattanooga. Western Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River, near Chattanooga, was taken from the calendar and passed.

Mr. Stewart then went on with his speech asympter the 'repeal' bill. At '120, without finishing his speech, he yielded the floor to his colleague. Mr. Jones (Rep., Nev.), who resumed his speech where he had left off yesterday.

In the course of the course and Mr. McPherson (Dem., Nev.) who causes of the recent dependent of the chief causes was the fear of the effect of free coinage of silver, and Mr. Jones repelled that suggestion, and reminded the New-Jersey Senator that there had been no talk of the free coinage of silver three or four months ago, when the panic began. The existence of the Silver Purchase act, Mr. McPherson contended, had he same effect as free coinage, because if that act continued in force long enough the result would be that the value of that kind of money, which was not par with good money, was going to upset values. He drew no distinction, he said, between free coinage and the Sherman act, except as quantity. The Sherman law would sing the thinty on a silver basis with the calendary of the gold sungle character of the coinage of the coinage would be that the world in the money of the country for thirty years after the establishment of independence. It was the standard of the of interwhiting prosperity. He repedied with indignation the taunt that sliver money would place the United States on the same level as Mexico and India. DISCUSSING THE BANKRUPTCY BILL. AN UNFORTUNATE TIME FOR DEMOCRATS TO MENTION THE SUBJECT.

Washington, Oct. 24 (Special).-Since people of the United States as the effort in this debate on the Bankruptey bill in the House of extraordinary session of Congress to destroy silver. Representatives began yesterday, the attendance The most corrupt, the most aggressive, the most outrageous means (secret at first) had been resorted to to enslave the majority of Senators. 'Let the proceedings, although several strong speeches the Administration," Mr. Stewart added, "take off have been delivered both for and against the pending measure. Among Republican members generally, in private conversation, the opinion is freely expressed that the Democratic managers have been cally at Mr. Power (Rep., Mont.), and Mr. Stewart sug-gested that there ought to be a quorum present, as he had many important things to say. The rell-call more than one of them remarked to-day, and as was answered by forty-six Senators (three more than a quorum), but before Mr. Stewart resumed may be regarded by the country as a Democratic notice that the Democratic party having come into control of the National Government, the prompt enactment of a general bankruptcy law is not only appropriate but necessary.

prompt enactment of a general bankruptcy law is not only appropriate but necessary.

In view of the business disasters which have overspread the country since the Democrafic party came into power in the executive and legislative departments of the Government, and which have been due to a great extent, if not wholly, to fear and distrust of that party, the suggestion cannot be dismissed as a mere pleasantry. As a matter of fact, one of the reasons urged when the proposition to bring the bill forward was under consideration was the necessity of such a measure for the relief of thousands of honest firms and individuals who have become insolvent by no faults of their own during the last six months.

In the debate to-day Mr. Denson, of Alabama, delivered an impassioned speech against the bill, which he denounced in the mest vigorous, not to say vehement, terms. A reference by Mr. Denson to "the proposed demonetization of sliver" provoked an interruption from Mr. Patterson, of Tennessee, and a lively colloquy followed, in which Messrs. Riand and Bryan also thok part. Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, made a strong argument in favor of the bill, in the course of which he declared that Congress has as much right to refuse to ennet legislation to render effective any other provision of the Constitution as that which relates to a uniform bankruptcy law. Mr. Ray, of New York, who favors a bankruptcy law, opposed several of the provisions of the pending bill, which he criticised in a strong speech.

AN CLEARING HOUSE NOTES BE TAXED? HE SUBJECT DISCUSSED BY THE HOUSE COM-MITTEE ON BANKING.

Washington, Oct. 24.-The House Committee on Banking and Currency will grant a hearing to-mor ow to persons who favor the repeal of the 19 per ent tax, so far as it may apply to circulating notes r certificates issued by Clearing House associa-ions. The subject was brought before the commit-Carolina. It appears that steps are about to be taken by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to ollect the tax on notes issued by the associated banks of Columbia, in that State. These notes are printed in the form of ordinary bank notes, and are banks propose to resist the collection of the tax and go into the courts and test its constitutionality unless afforded relief by the action of Congress.

The question was raised in the committee as to whether the tax would have to be paid by the Clearing House Association or by the note holders, and it developed a difference of opinion, some of the members contending that it would have to be said by the holders every time the notes were used in a business transaction. Mr. McLaurin said that if that should prove to be true, the people would be rained. Mr. Cobb, of Alabama, asked if any member of the committee objected to reporting Mr. McLaurin's bill and relieving those interested of this 10 per cent tax. The committee did not care about the construction of the present law; what it wanted to do was to say that this tax should not be collected, and to place the matter beyond doubt.

Representatives Turpin, of Alabama, and Black, of Georgia, supported bills repealing the law prohibiting loans on real estate security. Mr. Turpin had consulted bankers of his State and found none of them opposed to the reneal of this law. He believed real estate as good security as banks could get. Mr. Black spoke of the present law as an unbending iron prohibition against real estate, and saw no reason why it should not be repealed. Representative Meyer, of Louisiana, spoke of the general manner of handling crops in the South, and the alvantage the increase of banks had been to planters.

Washington, Oct. 21.—After passing a bill to license engineers and assistant engineers on vessels in the merchant marine, the House took up the Bankruptcy bill.
